It promises to be a momentous gathering of top-level women leaders from across the world who will convene in Durban to discuss how women can help create a better future for themselves, their communities and the planet. The Summit will bring together Africa's most influential women from politics, business, civil society, public sector, media and academia to share strategies for accelerating positive change. It will support them in their efforts to turn words into action, meaning making, policy formulation and long-term solutions to maximise the impact of their leadership for the benefit of society and the planet. High-level speakers on the day include former President of South Africa, Nelson Mandela's widow Graca Machel and His Majesty King Abdullah II of Jordan. "I am very grateful to be able to speak at this inaugural event and look forward to meeting the 150 women leaders from across Africa who have participated in the planning of this event," said His Majesty the King of Jordan. "It is an honour and privilege for me to be invited to speak at the summit and I hope that it will be a highly successful event. "During my visit to Africa, I have been impressed and inspired by the energy and enthusiasm that exists to transform women's lives and establish a just and equitable society. "Women are the engines of change in society and as we move to build a better future for all we need to foster a culture of leadership, so that more women can take up opportunities and find a place in society. "The summit will focus on how women can be more empowered, and give them the ability and capacity to contribute to positively impacting their lives. "It will be an opportunity to share best practices and to connect women leaders and thinkers across Africa and the world," said His Majesty the King of Jordan. South Africa will host the first Global Women's Leadership Summit on October 4 in Durban, South Africa. The Summit will be a platform
