Q: Java enum - Field not found: BIO_USER I have a client that uses a Java enums to configure the settings of the application. I use Spring to create a context to provide the data to this client, and Spring creates a single instance of the enums and provides the getters and setters for me, which I don't need. However, when I try to access one of the fields from the program, I get a Field not found: BIO_USER error. I've noticed this error before when I make changes to the enums and I do a build and run the app on the server, where the client isn't running. When I do this, the error goes away. Here are the relevant parts of the code: class MyEnum { public enum type { TYPE_A, TYPE_B, TYPE_C } public enum devID { DEV_ID_A, DEV_ID_B, DEV_ID_C } public enum userName { USERNAME_A, USERNAME_B, USERNAME_C } } public class MyContext { private MyEnum myEnum; .... private String userName; public String getUserName() { return myEnum.userName; } public void setUserName(String userName) { this.userName = userName; } } I know the enums are defined correctly, because I've checked this and they work fine. As I've said, this error goes away if I run the app where the client isn't running. I figured the issue is some

Today, Jones cycles 10 miles through the streets of Manhattan every day. He owns a few clothing brands and produces documentaries and music videos. He occasionally races, and in 2016, he competed in the Hawaii Ironman Triathlon. "I thought I had the endurance," he

The present invention relates to a method for producing a semiconductor device, and more particularly to a method for producing a semiconductor device which can suppress degradation of the quality of a semiconductor substrate due to defects or the like. In the case of producing a semiconductor device such as a semiconductor laser (LD), a superconductor device or a magnetic head, it is known that a silicon (Si) substrate is used. Then, a silicon substrate is cut and divided into a plurality of chips, and each of the chips is sealed with an epoxy resin. Recently, there have been demanded not only reduction of the size of a semiconductor substrate but also reduction of the size of a semiconductor device. However, when a semiconductor device is reduced in size, the yield of a semiconductor device decreases. Particularly, a size reduction of a semiconductor laser has been more demanded than those of other semiconductor devices, and thus reduction of the size of the semiconductor device has become more important. Therefore, it is important to improve the yield of a semiconductor substrate. The method for producing a semiconductor device which has been employed conventionally is explained by referring to FIGS. 2 to 4. First, as shown in FIG. 2, a silicon substrate 51 having a size of,
